

Jarret Austin Clark

04-05-88 / 05-14-06

A 1000 times we ask ourselves why
Why life isn't happy, when all we do is cry
What's the point in going on; without you
We feel so lost at times - we're not sure what to do

It's hard to understand how ones' life can change so fast
We find ourselves continuously thinking of our past
We miss all the things we did - all the fun we had
We have so many happy memories - yet we stay so sad

Alive alone is scary; our only child's death leaving us distraught
It simply shouldn't be this way - absolutely not
A parent should never have to bury their daughter or their son
Because once that happens, you feel as if you too are done

Our future now holds a different meaning than it used to
It seems dark, dreary, empty and meaningless without you
We're now different people than we used to be Because burying your only child changes you, you see

We exist & go through motions mostly in a fog; a daze
Thinking how things should be different - in so many ways
It's such a deep hurt Jarret, a pain we never knew
Guess it's because you were a wonderful son, you were you

We know we'll see you soon on The Other Side
But until our time comes for us to take that ride
We can't understand and we continue to ask why
You had to leave so soon to be a Spirit In The Sky

Love you Jarret
Mom and Dad, aka Tammy & Eric Slater

www.jarretaustinclark.com